THE Atlas steamer "Sarmia" sailed for New York via Jamaica on Monday morning last at 9 a.m. She carried ninety-five dollars for the latter port 21,000 bunches of bananas, 438 bags coffee, and 121 bales hides for New York.

PENDING the approval of the Italian Government Mr. Virgilio Giorgi will act as Consular Agent for Italy (from the 22nd inst) in this town. Señor D'Agostini, the present incumbent of the post, will leave for Italy on the Italian steamer leaving here on the 20th inst.

THE "Venus" on her last trip north left here with a list to starboard; this suddenly engaged to port and became of such an alarming nature that part of her deck cargo had to be jettisoned. She arrived in New Orleans with a slight list although relieved of her deck load.

CARTAGO was formerly the city of churches in this country, but "Nine Miles" promises to be far ahead in the very near future. The Wesleyans are a little slow, and if they do not soon erect a church there between the Episcopal and Baptist, they will probably be shut out by the Seventh Day Adventists or some other sect, and there is no room for more than one church between.

IT is proposed to change the name Port Arthur to Port Nicolson. In former years it was called Lim-Chou-Kaou. The name Port Arthur was given it by the English. In the year 1858 an English war ship entered the bay of Lim-Chou-Kaou; it being the first time that a foreign flag was ever seen in these waters. The captain of the ship in question was named Arthur, and the English name of the bay of this visit called the place Port Arthur.

THE "Official Gazette" publishes the following: In conformity with article No. 2 of law 6 dated 22nd May 1891 in respect to people of the yellow race, it is hereby decreed that the following persons are not permitted to enter this Republic: Arabs, Turks, Syrians, Armenians, and Gypsies of any nationality. Captains of the ports will take the necessary steps to prevent the landing of any of the above nationalities and Captains of steamers must be advised of the same. Dated the 10th June 1914.

one of the many resorts on Long Island Sound. The excursion was in charge of Rev. George C. Haas Pastor of the church. The vessel was commanded by Captain William Van Schaik, one of the best known excursion boat captains in New York harbor. He has commanded the General Slocum for almost the entire time since she was built in 1861. The number of excursionists on board to-day is variously estimated at from 1,500 to 2,000, but according to an official statement issued by the Knickerbocker Steamship Company, owners of the Slocum, the number of passengers was 873, that being one-third of the vessel's licensed capacity. The steamer, after leaving her dock this morning proceeded up the east river, all three of her decks being crowded with merry-makers. Bands played and the great show-boat was decorated with flags from stem to stern. The Slocum had reached a point near the sunken meadow off One Hundred and Thirty-third Street, Manhattan, which is at the extreme eastern end of Randall's Island, when she broke out in a lunchroom on the forward deck. The blaze was caused by the overturning of a pot of grease. The headway of the vessel was a high wind almost instantly turned the insignificant flame into a fury. Efforts were at once directed to subduing the fire, but they were futile. The blaze spread aft with almost lightning rapidity, and Captain Van Schaik, in the pilot house, had been informed of the outbreak of the fire while realizing the danger to the hundreds of excursionists, decided to send his vessel to the shore at One Hundred and Thirty-fourth Street. At this point there were a number of lumber yards and several huge oil tanks, and the Captain was warned that to attempt to land at this point would endanger the property and perhaps further imperil the lives of scores of people who had already been frightened into a state of inexpressible excitement. Changing the steamer's course slightly, he headed her for the North Brothers Island half a mile away. By this time the flames were rushing by leaps and bounds from the forward part of the ship aft. The great open decks, built for excursionists, with little obstruction from bow to stern, offered a clear sweep for the fire. As the Slocum dashed forward the flames caught stanchion and cabin wood work, setting and tearing their way across the vessel. The excursionists, but a few moments before in the full enjoyment of an ideal summer's day on Long Island Sound, were driven to the after part of the steamer to escape the heat, flames and smoke that were constantly increasing. Policemen and deck hands aboard the boat struggled hard to quiet the panic-stricken, but their efforts were in vain. The bedlam grew worse as frantic mothers sought their children, who had been at play about the decks. The steamer's whistle was blowing for assistance and tugs and other near-by craft answered the call. Before any of the boats could reach the burning steamer, however, the frantic women and children began to jump overboard. The current was strong, and there are many whirlpools in the channel. The boats that always abound in that vicinity picked up many persons from the water, but these were only a small number of those that were seen struggling in the swift current. On the Slocum the first sweep of the flames cut off escape from the hurricane deck, where a great many of the women and children were crowded together, and soon burned away the light wooden uprights which came down with a crash in those below. It is thought that most of those on the hurricane deck were burned. As the fire increased the struggle to gain a point of vantage at the stern became frantic. Women and children crowded against the aft rail until it gave way, and hundreds were pushed off in the river. After this there was a steady stream of persons who jumped overboard into the water. The hurried upstream was a line of little black spots marking the heads and bodies of those who had sought to escape the roaring furnace on the ship by throwing themselves overboard. Few of those saved by the small boats had on life preservers. At no time during the progress of the fire was there an opportunity either to lower the lifeboats or to get the life preservers cut from underneath the seats. This, perhaps, gives an idea of the rapidity with which the flames swept the decks. It was an experience harrowing and terrible, and that any escaped alive seems wonderful. Through all the wild panic during all that inferno with fire and smoke surrounding them, the officers and men of the doomed boat remained at their posts, but they were powerless to avert the catastrophe. The Slocum got within fifty feet of the north-west point of North Brothers Island and there stopped in the shallow water. It was just before she beached that the hurricane deck, the supports of which had burned away, fell with its load of women and children, adding to the panic and horror of those below. Very soon parts of the second and third decks also caved in. But before this happened the tug Walter Tracy had come alongside the burning steamer and been lashed to it. Many of the passengers were taken off by the crew of the Tracy, which remained alongside of the steamer until the tug's pilot house took fire. The point where the Slocum beached was just off the scarlet fever ward, on North Brothers Island. The patients, who had been out on the porch and the laws watching the approach of the burning steamer were ordered indoors and the physicians on the island hastened to the assistance of those who were being brought ashore through the shallow water. When finally, the Morgue authorities allowed the crowd to enter the Morgue a scene ensued which was harrowing in the extreme. In some cases identifications were found to have been erroneous, men laying claim to bodies they afterwards discovered were not those of their relatives. At the entrance of the Charities Pier, at the foot of East Twenty-sixth Street, the crowd to-night tried to push past the police and a riot resulted. At the height of the trouble a man who had learned that his wife was among the charred dead, tried to stab himself. Inside the pier the bodies were fanged in three rows the entire length of the pier, about 150 feet. St. Mark's Lutheran Church contained in its membership practically all those Germans of the Protestant faith within a radius of ten square blocks; the excursion was the event of the year for scores of well-to-do German families and had been looked forward to for many months. Finally parties of ten or more had been made up, including in many cases the old grandmother and the children of all ages, with a sprinkling of those men of the families who could spare a day from their work.

Anglican Church at Matina. TO THE EDITOR WEEKLY LIMON NEWS. Our Anglican Church here is under going hard times. Our last Harvest festival in December last year came off with the greatest satisfaction. The inhabitants of Matina contributed largely on the occasion. But sorry to say there is still some of our members who are indebted to the church. One of our leading men, at the time mentioned, donated $14 worth of goods, at present we do not know where he is located, but if this comes under his observation, we shall be greatly obliged if he would render us this sum, so that we may be able to put our church business in shape. Miss Agnes Miller, of Chicago, speaks to young women about dangers of the Menstrual Period — how to avoid pain and suffering and remove the cause by using Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"To YOUNG WOMEN:—I suffered for six years with dysmenorrhea (painful periods), so much so that I dreaded every month, as I knew it meant three or four days of intense pain. The doctor said this was due to an inflamed condition of the uterine appendages caused by repeated and neglected colds.

"If young girls only realized how dangerous it is to take cold at this critical time, much suffering would be spared them. Thank God for Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, that was the only medicine which helped me any. Within three weeks after I started to take it, I noticed a marked improvement in my general health, and at the time of my next monthly period the pain had diminished considerably. I kept up the treatment, and was cured a month later. I am like another person since, I am in perfect health, my eyes are brighter, I have added 12 pounds to my weight, my color is good, and I feel light and happy."—Miss AGNES MILLER, 25 Potomac Ave., Chicago, Ill.

The monthly sickness reflects the condition of a woman's health. Anything unusual at that time should have prompt and proper attention. Fifty thousand letters from women prove that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound regulates menstruation and makes those periods painless.

The Modern Torpedo

COMMENTING during the late Spanish War upon the efficiency of the torpedo, we said: "Although torpedo warfare has not as yet achieved results at all proportionate to the amount of thought and skill that have been devoted to it, the failure has probably been due more to a erally of larger diameter and greater length than the earlier types.

The torpedo here shown consists of a cigar-shaped body of phosphor-bronze or steel, divided into six separate compartments, as follows: 1, the magazine; 2, the secret chamber; 3, the reservoir; 4, the engine compartment; 5, the buoyancy compartment; 6, the bevel-gear chamber.

The magazine contains the explosive charge, which consists of a series of disks of wet gun cotton packed together. The foremost of the six cylinders contains a detonating primer consisting of fulminate of mercury. The small propeller at the extreme point of the torpedo is part of an ingenious safety device for preventing premature explosion in handling. When not in use the firing pin is held in check by a sleeve; but as soon as the torpedo and the rudders are elevated, the reverse movements taking place if the immersion is not sufficient. When a torpedo dives into the water the first part of its run is made on a wave line which crosses and recrosses the desired and ultimate level of immersion, the piston and the pendulum gradually bringing the torpedo to a true course. The reservoir forms the central body of the "fish." It is made of forged cast steel and is tested up to seventy atmospheres. A tyre at its after end feeds the air to the engine. The torpedo is driven by a three-cylinder engine, with cylinders 120 degrees apart, acting on a common crank. The engine is started by means of a valve which is opened by a lever striking a projecting lug on the launching tube, when the torpedo is fired.

The buoyancy chamber is an airtight compartment, the purpose of which is to afford the proper buoyancy to the torpedo; it carries a piece of lead ballast, by shifting which the trim can be controlled. The tubes carry the connecting rods for controlling the horizontal diving rudders.

Next comes the bevel gear chamber, where is located the gear for causing the propellers to rotate in opposite directions. The after propeller is keyed to the main shaft; the forward propeller is keyed to a sleeve which rotates freely upon the main shaft, and the motion is reversed by means of two bevel-wheel gears which turn on a spindle at right angles to the main shaft. The "tail" consists of a stock with vertical vanes, which act as the vertical rudder, and two frames which carry the horizontal rudders.

The torpedo is fired from a launching tube by the explosion of a small charge of gunpowder behind it. This compresses the air which surrounds the rear half of the torpedo and thrusts it out of the tube without any serious jar.

The range and speed of the torpedoes vary with the size. The weapon here shown is fourteen inches in diameter, fifteen feet in length, carries ninety pounds of gun-cotton, and has a speed of twenty-eight knots for a range of 800 yards. The eighteen-inch Whitehead torpedo is sixteen feet seven and one-half inches in length, carries a charge of 220 pounds of gun-cotton, and has a speed of thirty-one knots for 1000 yards.—Scientific American.

TORPEDO PRACTICE AT NEWPORT, R. I.—LAUNCHING A WHITE-HEAD TORPEDO FROM THE TORPEDO BOAT MORRIS.

lack of opportunity or of efficient handling than to any deficiency in the torpedo itself." The startling events that marked the opening of the Russo-Japan War have established the truth of that statement, for in the hands of an alert, intelligent and daring people this deadly weapon, in the first half hour of hostilities, sank two of the finest battleships and one of the best cruisers of the Russian Navy, and incidentally struck a blow at the naval prestige of Russia from which that country will take many years to recover. At the same time, the Port Arthur torpedo attack must be judged at its true value, and, therefore, we must not lose sight of the fact that information is finding its way to the public ear which makes it pretty evident that the Russian ships were not looking for, and were totally unprepared, to receive, a torpedo attack. If this is the case, what has been proved is that if the torpedo boat can get unmolested within easy range, the torpedo is fairly sure of its mark—and this we all knew well enough before the war began.

The Whitehead torpedo is undergoing constant development, the latest strikes the water, the rotation of the little propellers releases the sleeve and leaves the firing pin ready to strike the detonating primer the moment the torpedo meets an obstruction.

The "secret chamber" is the most ingenious part of this most ingenious piece of mechanism. Its piston, pendulum, and springs perform the important work of regulating the horizontal rudders which keep the torpedo at the proper depth. Immediately in front of the secret chamber is a narrow compartment perforated on its walls to allow the outside water to enter. The front wall of the secret chamber carries a piston, which can move in the direction of the axis of the torpedo. The pressure of the water is resisted by three coiled springs. At a certain predetermined depth, according to the tension on the springs, the springs and water pressure will be in equilibrium; below that depth the piston will be driven in by the water pressure, and above it the springs will push forward the piston. To prevent too sudden oscillation in this action, the piston is connected to the rod of a swinging pendulum. The motion of the piston is communicated Improvement being the introduction by rods, which pass through the hollow stay rods of the air chamber to the horizontal or diving rudders. If the torpedo goes too deep, the piston moves back, the pendulum swings forward, Cheese Custard.

Grate three or four ounces of cheese, beat three level tablespoonfuls of butter to a cream, beat two eggs, mix the cheese and butter together, then add the beaten eggs and one tablespoonful of milk; beat these all thoroughly, then into a buttered dish and bake in a quick oven until firm in the centre; serve as soon as removed from the oven.

Meat Souffle.
Put two level tablespoonfuls of butter in a frying pan; when it is hot add two tablespoonfuls of flour; stir this until smooth; then add gradually one cup of cold milk; stir this over the fire until boiling; then add a tablespoonful of salt, a little pepper and one cup of any chopped cooked meat or chicken, and the beaten yolks of two eggs; let this cook for one minute; put it away until cool; then beat the whites of the eggs and add them carefully to the meat mixture; stir this into a buttered dish and bake in a moderate oven twenty-five minutes; if chicken is used a little grated nutmeg is an improvement.

Devilled Salmon.
From new canned salmon remove all the skin and bones. Make a cream sauce of one tablespoonful of butter, one heaping tablespoonful of flour and a cupful of cream. Add to this sauce half a teaspoonful of salt, a dash of cayenne and a grating of nutmeg. Stir it until smooth and thick. Draw toward the back of the stove and add the yolks of three hard boiled eggs that have been well mashed. Take from the fire and add one teaspoonful of lemon juice, one tablespoonful of chopped parsley, and then the flesh, broken into small flakes. Add a little more seasoning if desired (it should be highly seasoned) and turn it into a buttered baking dish or into individual shells. Sprinkle with buttered bread crumbs and bake in a quick oven until quite brown. This fish can be served cold with a cucumber sauce made as follows: Grate a peeled cucumber after scraping out the seeds; squeeze it in a cloth bag to strain out all the juice possible. Then mix the pulp remaining with a cupful of mayonnaise. This should not be done until just before it is served, or it will thin the mayonnaise too much. Serve it in a little gray bowl with the fish.

HINTS FOR THE HOUSEKEEPER

When making a pudding, don't forget to make a pleat in the cloth at the top of your pan, so as to allow the pudding to swell.

When making soup or stew with old vegetables, add one teaspoonful of sugar, which will sweeten them and make them taste like new.

To clean tinware, first wash the tin thoroughly with hot soapsuds, wipe it thoroughly dry, and then scour with flour and well crumpled newspaper.

The hands can be cleaned better with warm water than with cold, but they should always be rinsed afterwards with cold water, as this keeps them in a better condition.

A good polish for stoves is made of one tablespoonful of powdered alum mixed with the stove polish. The brilliance that this polish will give to a stove will last for a long time.

To keep sponges soft and white wash them in water with a little tartaric acid in it, then rinse in plenty of cold water. Take care not to put in too much tartaric acid, or the sponges will be spoiled.

Stains may be taken off an enameled bath if it is rubbed well with rough sand moistened with vinegar. This will always clean enameled pots and pans, no matter how burnt or discolored they may be.

When a spoonful of borax is put into the last water in which white clothes are rinsed, it has the effect of whitening them. Before it is added to the rinsing water, the borax should be dissolved in a little hot water.

Borax is a useful thing to have in the kitchen. Add a little to the water when boiling out enameled saucepans, and it will help to cleanse them. If added to the water dish cloths are washed in it will help to keep them a nice color.

Peanuts, almonds, English walnuts or pecans may be used for these nut-bars. Prepare the nuts by removing the inner covering and chopping them. Grease the bottom and sides of a broad shallow tin pan with fresh butter, and put the nuts into it, spreading them evenly. Put one pound of granulated sugar, with half a teaspoonful of water and a pinch of cream of tartar, into a kettle and boil until thick, but not too brittle. Pour the syrup over the nuts and set aside to cool. When slightly stiff mark off into wide bars with a sharp knife, and let stand several days, when it will become soft and delicious.

A SERMON FOR SUNDAY

AN ELOQUENT DISCOURSE ENTITLED, "NEED OF A REVIVAL"

The Rev. Dr. Philip S. Moxam Says That We Require a Fresh Conviction of the Reality of Salvation—Too Much Absorption in the Pursuit of Riches.

BROOKLYN, N. Y.—In Plymouth Church the Rev. Philip S. Moxam, of Springfield, Mass., preached Sunday morning. Dr. Moxam's subject was "The Need of a Revival."

He took his text from Habakkuk ii: 2: "O Jehovah, revive Thy work in the midst of the years; in the midst of the years make it known; in wrath remember mercy," Dr. Moxam said.

In times past, when the church was in a low state of religious vitality, the more spiritual of the members, distressed by the absence of vigorous life and burdened by the condition of the multitude who were looked upon as lost, sought a revival of religion.

The "protracted meeting," as it was called, was simply a continuous series of meetings for preaching and prayer and exhortation and confession.

An important accompaniment of the preacher's work was the work of private visitation and appeal, and the testimony of religious experience.

Usually, after a time, the revival was followed by a gradual relapse into formality of religious service, coldness of religious temper, and indifference to the higher claims of the church.

The evils were incident to the mistaken theology that held supreme place in the churches and largely supplanted the simplicity of the gospel of Christ.

Wrong ideas of God and Christ and sin and salvation and righteousness and the hereafter were rooted so deep that they could be destroyed only by a criticism so drastic that it had seemed to tear up fundamental truth of the spiritual life.

At the present time an attempt is being made to restore the revival methods of last century. Organizations have been formed the more efficiently to prosecute this attempt.

But I speak of this attempt now not to criticize it; I would rather welcome it if it contained any promise of real good.

On the other hand, there is an absorbing devotion to the pursuit of riches. There is an exaggerated appreciation of mere materiality. This widely affects commercial and industrial enterprise.
