THE TIMES Port Limon, Costa Rica (G. A.) The Coming Coronation AND ARRANGEMENTS FOR KING'S STATE VISIT TO THE GULLDHALL.

It is expected that the arrangements to be made by the Corporation of London for the visit of the King and Queen to the city on June 29 will largely, if not entirely, follow those observed on Saturday, October 25, 1902, when King Edward and Queen Alexandra were welcomed in the city after their coronation.

In that event the Lord Mayor and the eight lords, on horseback, with their state officials, also mounted, and with the Aldermen and the Common Councilors of the city in carriages, will meet the King and Queen at the city boundary at Temple Bar.

On their arrival the Lord Mayor, having dismounted, will advance to the King and present to him the pearl sword given to the city by Queen Elizabeth. The ancient custom is for the King to touch the sword and return it, and this being done, the Lord Mayor will remount his horse and take up position immediately in front of the Sovereign's personal escort, where, bareheaded he will carry the city sword of state before His Majesty.

It has already been stated that the King and Queen will attend a service at St. Paul's Cathedral on their way to the Guildhall, and in regard to this a separate programme will be issued, but it is expected that the Lord Mayor, carrying the sword erect, will precede the King and Queen to their seats and there lay the sword before the King. At the close of the service the Lord Mayor will escort their Majesties to their carriage and the state procession to the Guildhall through the streets will be resumed.

THE QUEEN'S CROWNING.
The crowning of Queen Mary, on June 22, will be only a little less impressive than that of King George. During the long service that precedes the sitting of the crown on the King's head the Queen will occupy a chair of state in the chapel of St. Edward the Confessor. After the King has been proclaimed Sovereign of the British Realm the Queen will be led to a stool placed between the altar and that historic chair of St. Edward, in which, when the moment arrives, the King will already be seated.

Queen Mary will now be anointed upon head and hands by Archbishop Lang, who places the crown on her head and the ring of peace on her finger. Grasping the scepter that bears the dove, the Queen will then be led to a throne two or three steps lower than that of King George, and upon his immediate right. It will be the Archbishop of Canterbury, however, who will instruct the King and Queen in the details of the coronation ceremony.

details, more especially as regards their morning and afternoon attire when in waiting on the Queen.

KING BOMBARDED WITH VERSES.

The author of "Mother, Pin a Rose on Me" must look out for his laurels in this the coronation year of King George V., for all England, like Silas Wegg, is dropping into poetry or what passes from it among the charitably inclined.

Dressmakers, clerks, commercial travellers, actresses, sailors, street cleaners and office boys are breaking out into verse, and music publishers and magazines are being deluged with so-called coronation odes, but so far as heard from the laurels of Sir Alfred Austin are absolutely safe.

Nothing can give you a clearer line on the character of the verse that is being offered than the foregoing statement. One of the odes written by an office boy, who has evidently been in touch with the genius American, begins:—

"Great George our King, You're the real thing."

And a clerk at Harrod's begins his offering with a majestic sweep, thus:—

"Mighty Monarch of a wondrous realm,
We pray that you may hold the helm."

Which, after all, is not half bad when you consider that the fifth George is a sailor King.

Patriotism is usually a good thing, but when it finds relief in verse it becomes painful. A reader for one of the leading magazines houses says:—

"We have been overwhelmed by poets and would-be-poets, mostly the latter. Hundreds of the efforts are so laughable that I really am glad that I haven't chapped lips. One versifier in Houndsditch has a peculiar idea of what a coronation celebration is, for in his contribution he describes it as an "orge," thus finding a word that rhymes with George. On the other hand, I have passed upon some high class coronation odes and songs which will be read and heard by the public in the near future.

So you will see that being a King has its disadvantages, as fully a million verse makers in England are bombarding His Majesty, with Scotland, Wales the Overseas Dominions and, last but by no means least, Ireland still to be heard from. In fact, the ode making habit has become so general that instead of putting a nickel in the slot it is only necessary to buy a whiskey and soda for a loyal Briton—same price—to hear him declaim his coronation ode.

Sad Accident.

Andrew Cornwall, a native of Jamaica succumbed to injuries received while picking up bananas on Saturday last.

The man was sitting on the pilot of the engine and whilst it was in motion he missed his balance and fell forward, coming in contact with the wheels of the engine. He sustained mutilation of both legs. The man was at once taken up and brought to Limon and placed in the United Fruit Company's hospital where he died an hour after admission. The accident occurred at a spur near Beverley.

CHINESE WEEP DURING STORM.

Beat Their Heads And Prepared To Die While Bornu WAS BATTLING WITH SEAS.

AMUSEMENT FOR OFFICERS OF THE STEAMSHIP.

Havana.—Punk sticks were burned and all the josses in the religious calendar of John Chinaman were invoked on bended knees and with profound salaams by seventy-five pigtailed sons of the Orient while the good ship Bornu ploughed through a snow storm in the Bay of Fundy, and brisk blast along her way to this port from Halifax.

The storm was at its worst last Sunday.

The gale lasted two days. To the other passengers it was forty-eight hours of discomfort.

To the Chinamen it was a lifetime of terror, in which seasickness was temporarily forgotten and during which they were at the mercy of the foreign "devils" in a craft that threatened every minute to hurl them into the presence of their ancestors.

Striven about the stowage they beat their hands upon the floor, pray and prepared to die.

Thirty five of the Chinamen lauded glad to feel solid earth beneath their feet once more. The balance of their number must brave the danger of the deep dying between here and Mexico.

Home and Foreign News.

His Excellency Sir Sydney Olivier, B.A., K.C.M.G., left the island of Jamaica on Wednesday 1st May for England. It is stated that the Governor will represent the West Indies at the coronation of His Majesty King George V.

The Hon. Philip Clarke Cork, C.M.G., Jamaica's Colonial Secretary, was sworn and took the prescribed oath as Acting Governor of the colony. Mr. Robert Johnstone was also appointed Acting Colonial Secretary vice Hon. P. C. Cork, C.M.G.

A commission, consisting of six Chinese gentlemen, came from San José on Sunday last to receive their Minister of Affairs for Central America. The Minister is expected to arrive here today from Guatemala. There will be a banquet at Hotel Mongol on Wednesday evening in honor of the occasion.

We would respectfully remind the Editor of the "Daily News" of Kingston, Jamaica, that Costa Rica is not in Nicaragua, but an entire separate Republic of Central America, his utter disregard of the Geography of South and Central America so painfully evident in an editorial of the 8th May that we are inclined to raise a subscription and buy him the necessary maps and books.

There is to be an exhibition of rubber in the Agricultural Hall in London, during the Coronation season. Sir H. A. Baer, speaking at an entertainment in connection with the exhibition, said he looked forward to the time when rubber will compete with the quarry, and that in about ten years hence the streets of London will have every chance of being paved with rubber.

The Hon. H. L. A. Simpson the vice-Chairman of the City Council in Jamaica, has given notice of his resignation as a member of the Board. It is announced that the Hon. S. A. G. Oax will be nominated for the vacant seat. Mr. Simpson's resignation does not prevent him from sitting at the Board's table as he has a seat by virtue of his being representative of Kingston in the Legislative Council.

Russo-Germ in Pact

London.—The Standard's correspondent in Berlin informs his paper that the Russo-German agreement only awaits signature. It contains among other things, he says, that each Government will take steps to prevent from any combination of powers having an aggressive tendency toward the other. The remaining provisions in it are mainly a mutual recognition of the respective interests of the countries in the Middle East.
